The following information and resources are for older adults experiencing abuse or those concerned about a senior.

ELDER ABUSE

Elder abuse is defined as any action or inaction that jeopardizes the health or well-being of an older adult. It includes denial of an older adult's fundamental rights, and neglect (active or passive) by a caregiver. It can take many forms including: financial, physical, emotional, sexual, and spiritual.

An abuser can be anyone, but most often it is a family member or partner. Abusers can also be friends or caregivers. They are most often close enough to have influence or control over the victim. Abuse includes using name calling, threats, yelling, put-downs, and physical intimidation to control the senior's actions or decisions. It also includes taking money or possessions without permission, and using coercion to have a senior sign documents. In many cases, the older adult feels they have to give in or agree to something in order to avoid escalation or to ensure their safety. Sometimes abuse can unintentionally occur due to caregiver stress. With additional supports for the older adult and the caregiver, some of this stress can be relieved. Victims include both males and females from every income level and culture, as well as people in both good and poor health.

Signs of abuse:

Older adults being abused may become withdrawn, depressed, and isolated. They may have financial difficulty, unexplained injuries, anxiety, or difficulty sleeping. They may have changes in hygiene, nutrition, or medication. They may experience diminishing self-esteem.

Some effects of abuse can include:

Abused or neglected older adults have a 200% increased risk of early death. The stress of living in an abusive situation shortens older people's lives by several years on average. Living with abuse and neglect can also significantly increase the person's chances of becoming ill, or may make other health problems worse. Up to 6% of abused older adults become severely depressed. www.seniors.alberta.ca/services/

Overlooking Warning Signs

Sometimes these signs of abuse are mistaken as a part of growing older, or may look like other health conditions. For example: mental confusion, depression, or anxiety resulting from abuse or neglect may look like dementia. People may not realize that sometimes older adults are experiencing frequent falls or have long-term pain because they are being abused or neglected. Ageism can also play a factor in why these warning signs are overlooked. Ageism is a social attitude and a way of looking at older people that stereotypes them.

For example, often in situations of abuse, older people aren't taken seriously because they are viewed as being forgetful and seen as complainers. It is estimated that between 4 and 10 percent of older adults in Canada experience some type of abuse or neglect from someone they trust or rely on (Public Health Agency of Canada, www.publichealth.gc.ca, 2010).
